Tut is a nine-year-old boy. He has a cheerful face that always shines with a smile. Tut loves his school because it's where he learns reading, writing and Arithmetic, and plays football with his friends.

Tut likes to help his parents with house work. When his mother asks him to do something like making his bed or putting his plate in the kitchen, he always listens to her. At school, Tut's colleagues also like him because he is a good kid and has moralities.

One day, while Tut was on his way home from school, he saw a small bird that couldn't fly. The bird was very frightened and could not even ran away. Tut noticed that the bird's legs were injured and said "Oh my goodness! What a poor bird!".

Quietly, Tut walked near the bird and said “Hey beautiful bird!” what’s the wrong with you?” Tut asked. The bird looked at him as if it says: My legs hurt and I can’t fly. Tut felt the bird’s feelings and he went down beside him saying: Well, well, don’t be afraid, let’s do something about that, shall we? The bird felt a little bit safe and let Tut’s hands carry him away.

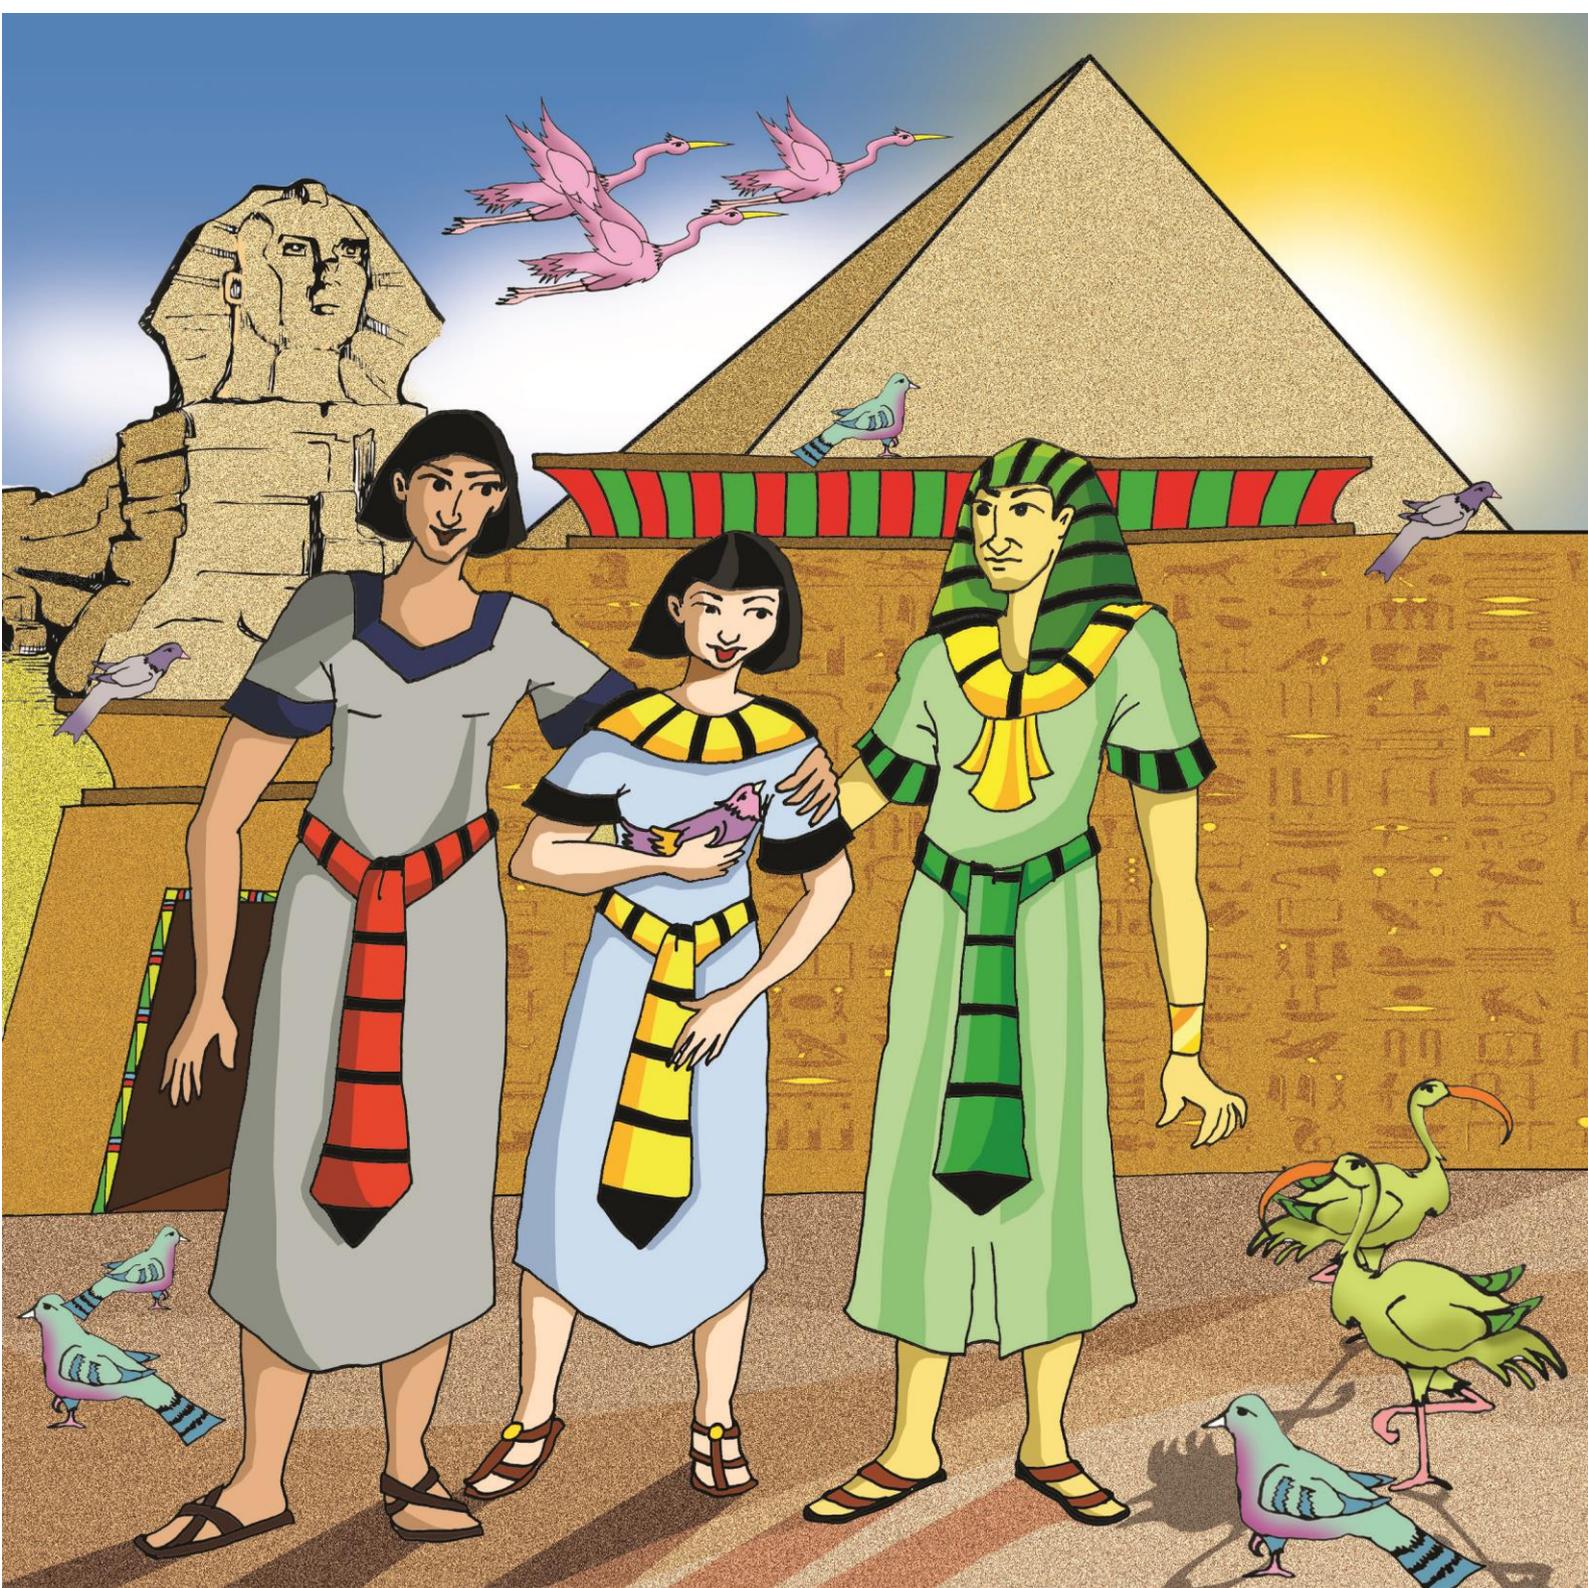

Then he wondered what should he do for this delicate bird and thought about asking Mr. Semho The Prime Guard about “The Birds city”. Mr. Semho told him that The Birds City is very close to The Sphinx, which is next to The Great Pyramids of Giza, Khufu, Khafre and Menkaure. Sphinx was built by King Khafre. His body was shaped like a lion symbolizing power and his head was shaped like a man symbolizing wisdom.

As soon as Tut arrived at home, he asked his mother Sherwet to bring two plates, one with fresh water and the other with rice because he felt that the bird was starving.

When the father “Sneferu” arrived, Tut explained the situation to him. The father “Sneferu” said: I know the place of “The Birds City”. After lunch, Tut and his father - with the bird - went by their cart-horse to “The Birds City”. They met the manager who welcomed them very well.

Tut gave the bird to the manager to treat and take care of him.
Tut asked the manager, politely: Do you accept donations in “The Birds City?”
” Yes, we accept donations.” Answered the manager.
“Can I donate all I have, dad?” Tut asked his father.
“What a good idea. If you want this, I don’t mind, it’s your money, Tut.” replied the father.

" Thank you, dad." said Tut.

Tut donated all his money that he had in his pocket to "The Birds City". The manager was amazed by Tut's behavior. He thanked him so much and gave him paupers with birds and animal's paintings on it. The manager asked him if he could make a group supporting "The Birds City" at his school. He promised him that he would ask the school's president and try to spread the care for animals in his school.

In a sunny day, stood on Tut's window a very beautiful bird singing happily. When Tut heard it's nice tweeting, he felt like as if it was saying "Thanks great God."

From that on, Tut understood the birds words.
