

Professor at the Higher Institute of Justice

Department of Comparative Jurisprudence

The purposes of the endowment in the Islamic law, rooted and applied

Prepared By: Prof. Abdul Rahman bin Ali Al-Hattab

College of Sharia, Islamic University in Madinah

All praise is due to Allah alone, and may Allah's Peace and Blessings be upon His Final Messenger, having said that:

Waqf is something which distinguishes the Islamic sharia from all the other preceding divine legislations. The Islamic sharia intended regarded objectives in waqf that should be taken into consideration when contemplating its rulings, and when preponderance between the matters in which there is difference of opinion. This research has revealed some of these objectives, in addition to indicating the most important rules pertaining to Islamic objectives in this title.

The following is a summary of what was stated in the research that consists of a preface and two sections:

The preface briefly tackles the definition of waqf, and the evidences of its legitimacy, and its types. Then, the research touches upon the generic purposes of waqf in the first section, which are in short:

The actualization of servitude, the continuation of good deeds, fund management and circulation, clarity, justice, freedom, and finally cooperation and social solidarity.

The second topic is devoted to the most important purpose-oriented rules affecting the provisions of the endowment, which are: