Hossam is an active boy. He likes reading and learning computer programs. Hossam also likes to have everything he sees, even things that don't matter for him, he wants to take them.

When Hossam goes out with his father to buy some of the necessities of the house such as vegetables and fruit, he likes to get sweets, magazines, toys, balloons, ka ..., bu ..., v ..., m ..., c.... Hossam wants everything.

Hossam is happy to have toys and balloons.

Hossam's Father said: We should only buy what we need, we have to learn to economize." "I want everything" Hossam said.

The father said advisedly: We can't get or keep everything.

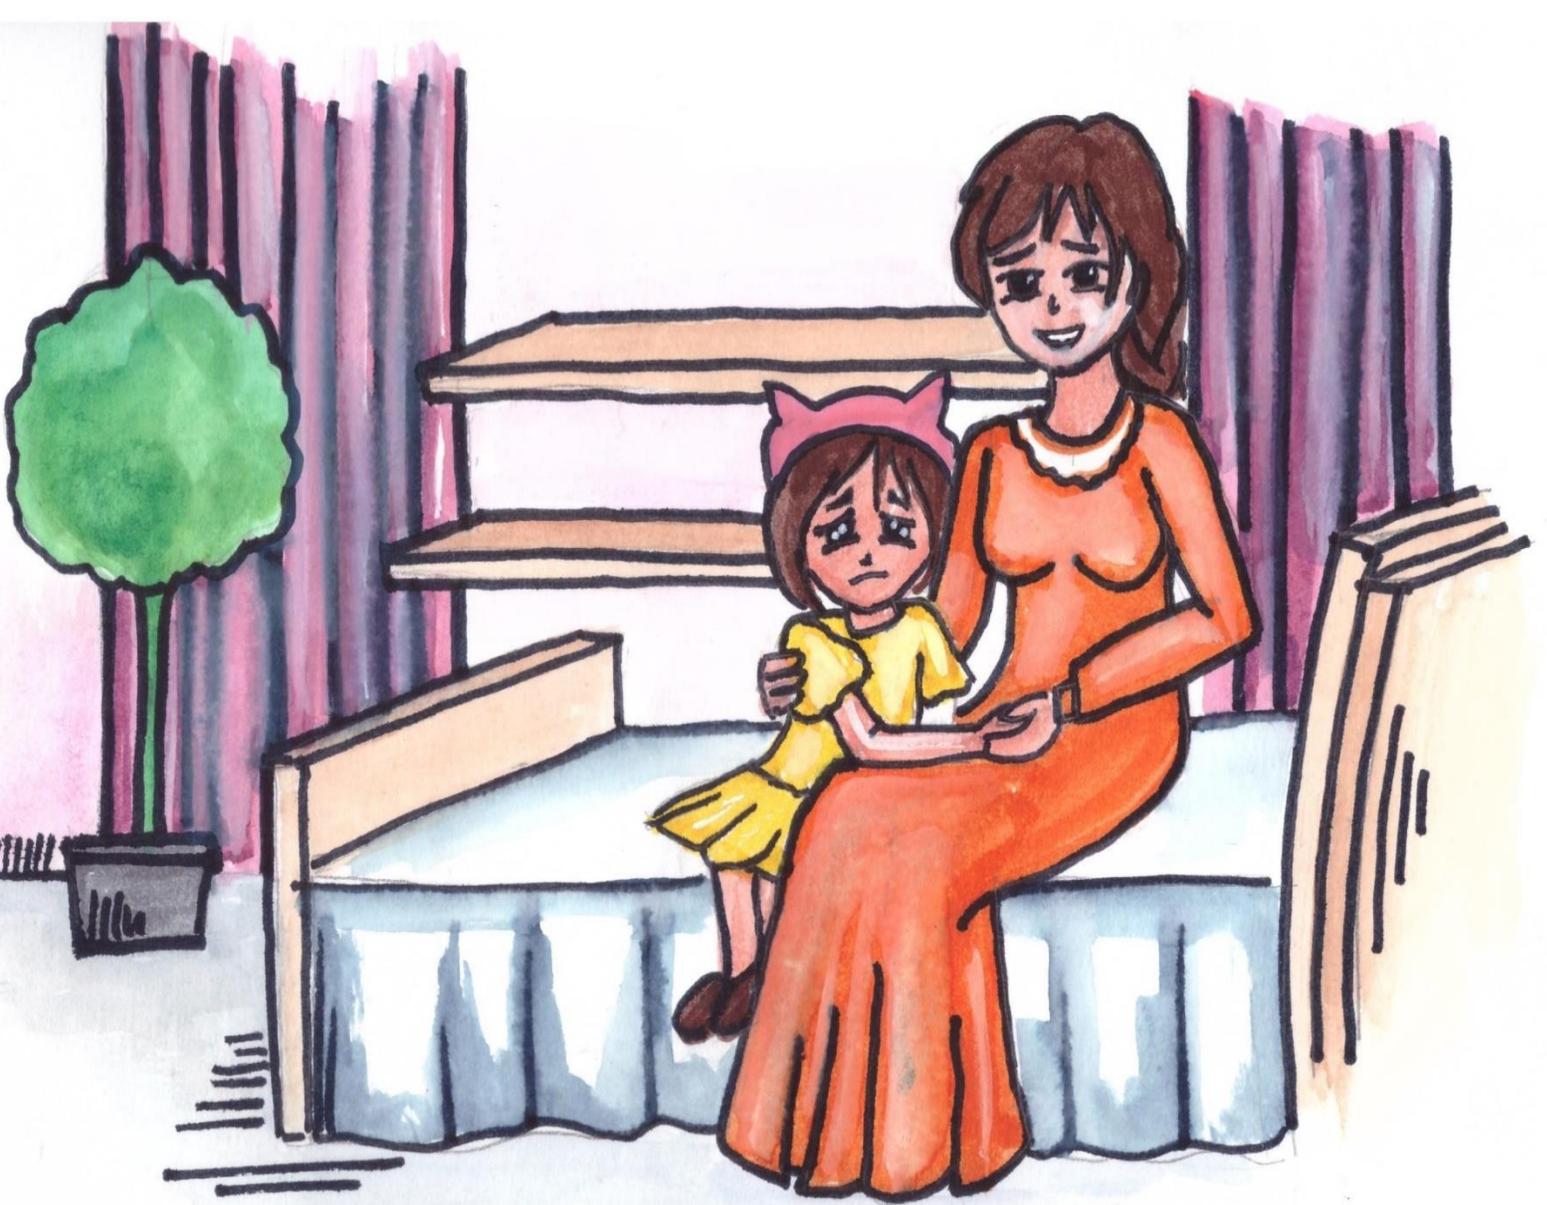

Hossam looked at his father silently. Hossam didn't understand the words of his father.

While Hossam was walking with his father on the way, he came up with an idea, which is to take the toys of his sister Sarah.

When Hossam came home, he hurried to Sarah's room. He found her asleep in her bed. Very quietly, Hossam took the duck, the ship, the cubes, the doll, and the colored rocket. Hossam carried out them to his room.

Sarah woke up from her sleep, but she didn't find her toys. She said surprisingly: Maybe I left them in the garden. However, Sarah went to the garden, but she did not find anything. Sarah went to her mother crying and said: Mom when I woke up I could not find my toys in my room.

Hossam's room was crowded, and the toys were on the ground, over the desk, near the window, and in all the corners. Moreover, there were old things that packed in the room, which weren't used by Hossam. Is this acceptable?

Hossam wants to sit on the desk to open the computer and send an email to his friend Ramzi. Hossam wants to tell Ramzi about the "Reading Competition" that is organized by the Bibliotheca Alexandrina. Hossam can't cross into his desk or move in any direction. The door of the room is barely opened. In this moment, Hossam remembered his father's words.

Hossam felt sorry for what he did with his sister Sarah, and what made it difficult to move in his room. So Hossam immediately went to Sarah's room, carrying the toys he took.

Hossam apologized to his sister. Hossam said to his mother: I will go with my father tomorrow to an important place. The mother was happy and smiled to Hossam.

In the morning, Hossam went with his father to a Charity Association to donate with all things he didn't use. Hossam decided to buy only what he needed, and to keep what he needed. What do you think about Hossam's behavior?
